RESEARCH INTERESTS

I am a pediatric translational researcher and was named the Robert P. Kelch Professor of Pediatrics in 2016. I am one of few individuals across the country who has completed dual training in Pediatric Endocrinology and Pediatric Health Services Research and a Master's in Public Health, and my research agenda focuses on the overarching themes of childhood obesity and type 1 and type 2 diabetes. Because of my specialized training, I have been able to approach these problems from a unique vantage point, using a variety of methodologies including applied clinical research, epidemiologic analyses of nationally representative data, state transition modeling, cost-effectiveness analysis, as well as design and emerging technologies (design ethnography, participatory design, human-centered design, quality improvement science, and digital/social media communications). To date, I have over 140 peer-reviewed publications, and I am first or senior author on over 60 of those publications. Through my work I have developed a national and international reputation in the field of Pediatric Endocrinology.

At the 2016 Pediatric Academic Societies meeting, I was the first recipient of the Paul Kaplowitz, MD, Endowed Lectureship for my contributions to quality and cost-effective care in Pediatric Endocrinology, an award sponsored by the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Pediatric Endocrine Society. My major research contributions have included studies evaluating recommended screening guidelines for type 2 diabetes for overweight and obese children, studies evaluating the link between overweight and obesity and timing of puberty and chronic disease risk factors, research in health outcomes for type 1 diabetes, and studies of online health communities and patient innovation.

In 2018, I made a broader shift in my work to focus the development of learning health systems for obesity and diabetes. To support this shift in focus to a broader systems design approach to healthcare, I completed training in Advanced Methods in Quality Improvement at Cincinnati Children's, became an Epic Physician Builder to redesign the clinical workflow to support an LHS model, and achieved Clarity proficiency and skills in developing Tableau dashboards to free health system data for clinical care, quality improvement, and research. As of July 2019, I have taken on the roles of Associate Chief Medical Information Officer for Pediatric Research and Associate Chair for Health Metrics and Learning Health Systems for the Department of Pediatrics which allows me to further support this vision for pediatric health. In 2020 I was named Ambulatory Care Clinical Chief for Pediatric Medical Subspecialties, an operational role which is guiding ambulatory health system redesign and that leverages my Health IT/Pediatrics leadership roles. I also hold the role of Associate Director for Informatics and Clinical Research Innovation for the Caswell Diabetes Institute, which has the objective of leveraging EHR tools and data for diabetes/metabolism researchers on campus.

My learning health system work focuses on two main areas:

1) Type 1 Diabetes: I collaborate with the T1D Exchange Quality Improvement Collaborative to improve the quality of care and health outcomes of individuals with Type 1 Diabetes. Particular areas of interest include adoption of telemedicine, Epic tool development and Tableau dashboard development for support operations and QI, measurement of patient reported outcomes (i.e. psychosocial outcomes) using Health IT tools, and interventions to support data literacy and data engagement among parents of children with T1D.

2) Prevention and treatment of childhood overweight/obesity: We are focused on development of collaboration across the state of Michigan to reduce childhood overweight/obesity rates (funded by the Michigan Health Endowment Fund). Furthermore, I serve as Director of the newly established Childhood Obesity Research Core (CORC), an NIH-funded core of the Michigan Nutrition Obesity Research Center which supports basic, clinical, and translational researchers focused on childhood nutrition and obesity and enhances integration of research into the clinical delivery system.

Other areas of interest include collaborations with human computing interaction and machine learning/artificial intelligence experts to understand how data can be used to solve real world healthcare problems, biomarker discovery for prediabetes and type 2 diabetes in children and the use of real-time CGM in prediabetes.
